4 In your notebook, write an account of a school trip to an outdoor activity centre using these notes. Use which where you can. Start like this:

Last week we went on a school trip to an outdoor activity centre, which was very exciting.

Last week - school trip to an outdoor activity centre - very exciting. Went whitewater rafting - quite scary.

Boats - for about six people - travelled really fast down the river.

Water - not very deep - extremely cold. Didn't want to fall in!

Went over a small waterfall - a bit of a surprise!

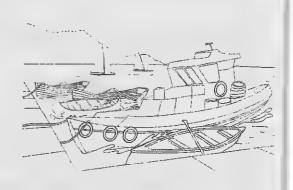

Instructor encouraged us - made us feel more confident.

Hot chocolate and cake after trip - very nice!

At 6 am on Saturday 27th February 2010, in San Juan Bautista, the island's only town, 12-year-old Martina Maturana felt an earth tremor. She looked out of the window and noticed that the fishing boats in the harbour were bobbing up and down and crashing into each other. She immediately ran 400 metres from her home to the town square to ring the emergency bell. It was Martina's quick thinking which saved the lives of the majority of the 650 islanders. People ran to high ground for safety, escaping the massive wave that was caused by an earthquake off the coast of Chile. A few minutes later, a wall of water crashed onto the land and swept 300 metres into the village. The houses and buildings on the island that were close to the coast were immediately destroyed, including the school at which Martina was a student. "The wave was 20 metres high," said one man whose house was destroyed by the sea. "It was terrifying."

2 Look carefully at the style of the article.

- 1 Underline words and phrases in the text which the journalist uses to add drama to the account. The first one is done for you: crashing.
- 2 What information does the journalist give you in the first sentence? time...
- 3 The journalist uses quite a lot of numbers in the article. Why?
- 4 Why do you think the journalist ends by quoting the man whose house was destroyed by the sea?

1 Read the text and choose the correct answers.

In recent years, many of Barcelona Football Club's best players have come from the club's youth academy, La Masía. Talented youngsters are chosen from all over Spain and from other countries to live and train at the academy. Lionel Messi, for example, moved there from his home in Argentina when he was only 13. Living and training together helps the boys to develop the team spirit that is so important in a team sport.

The young players must have natural talent, good co-ordination, speed and agility. They also need an instinctive ability to make quick decisions on the pitch.

- 1 What is La Masía?

Learning phrasal verbs

To help you remember phrasal verbs, think of an example which means something to you personally and write it down.

I'm into martial arts.

My cousins often come round at the weekend and we chill out.

I want to take up karate next year.

At the circus

- 1 Read the text and find:
- 1 The name of a country
- 2 Two words to describe people who watch a circus performance
- 3 A word for people who take part in a circus
- 4 Four sports

The Cirque du Soleil is a circus from Quebec in Canada. It has given performances to 100 million spectators in more than 300 cities in over forty countries on six continents.

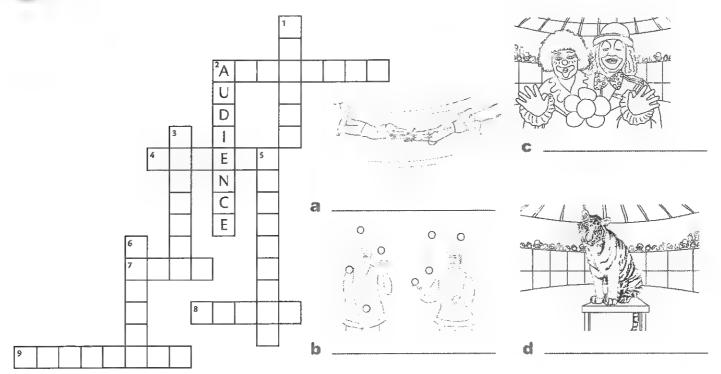

About half of Cirque du Soleil's 1300 performers are athletes who have trained in gymnastics, trampolining, swimming and diving. Some of them have even competed at the Olympics. The Cirque du Soleil amazes audiences around the world. They are part acrobatic circus, part theatre with a little extra magic. The one thing the Cirque du Soleil doesn't have is animals.

They think it's wrong to use animals in circuses. They do not agree with the way animals are trained. "They are animals, not performers. They should be in the jungle," says one of the troupe's directors. "We will never have animals in our shows."

Toy Story 3

Director

Lee Unkrich

Voiced By

Tom Hanks

Tim Allen

What's the best family film of all time? It's difficult to choose, but the Toy Story series would certainly be in the top ten. And if I had to choose one, it would be Toy Story 3. This 3D computer-animated comedy drama is directed by Lee Unkrich and stars Woody, voiced by Tom Hanks, and Buzz Lightyear, voiced by Tim Allen. Several other well-known actors' voices are used for other characters. The story is set in a town in America.

At the beginning of the film, Andy, 17, is leaving for college. He's clearing his room for his little sister. He decides to take Woody with him to college and he leaves the other toys to be put in a room at the top of the house. However, the toys are sent to a children's play centre by mistake, where they have a very difficult time. Woody comes to the rescue and the toys are finally taken in by a girl called Bonnie, who gives them a good home.

As you watch the film, you have no idea of the terrible things that are going to happen to the toys. This is part of the film's success because you are kept in suspense: you really don't know whether the toys are going to survive. However, the film ends happily and there are some very funny moments, such as when Buzz is reprogrammed and starts speaking Spanish.

The script is well written and the CGI (computer-generated imagery) is amazing. The soundtrack includes songs such as We Belong Together and You've got a Friend in Me.

This is a truly wonderful film for all the family. I thoroughly recommend it.

Live and let live

Read the article below to find out more about Richard Turere and his lion lights. Which paragraph relates to the diagram?

efore he invented the lion lights, Richard tried other ways of protecting the cows from the lions. His first idea was to use fire because he thought lions were afraid of fire. However, he soon realised that it didn't work. In fact, it had the opposite effect. It helped the lions to see the cattle in the cowshed. His next idea was to make a scarecrow to make the lions think that someone was there all the time to protect the animals. But lions are clever. They realised the scarecrow wasn't a real person because it didn't move. Then, one night, when he was walking around the cowshed with a torch, he discovered that the lions were scared of a moving light. He realised that they connected moving lights with people. That was when he had the idea for his lion lights.

He used a solar panel to produce electricity and he connected it to an old car battery, which stored the electricity. He found an old indicator box from a motorcycle and he connected this to the battery. He also connected the indicator box, which he called a 'transformer', to the bulb from an old torch. The indicator box made the lights flash on and off, just as the indicators on a car flash to show a change of direction. The flashing lights made the lions think that someone was walking around the cowshed protecting the animals, so they stayed away.

Since Richard has set up the lion lights at his parents' farm, none of the family's cattle have been attacked by lions. The lights have also been used by other farmers around Kenya with the same success.

Understanding meaning from context

Find these words in the text in Exercise 1: cowshed scarecrow battery indicators We know that:

- fire helped the lions see the cattle in the cowshed.
- Richard walked around the cowshed with a torch.

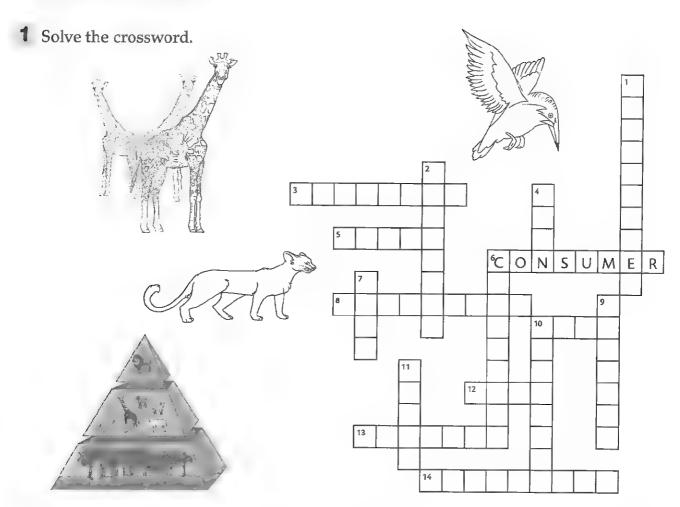

So a cowshed is a place where cows are kept.

2 Try to work out the meaning of these words: a scarecrow, a battery, indicators.

A teenage gene-ious!

the age of 17, Fred Turner has been awarded 'UK Young Engineer of the Year'.

Fred has straight brown hair. His brother Gus has curly red hair. Fred was determined to find out why their hair is so different. So he built a DNA testing machine <sup>2</sup> his bedroom.

He spent almost a year building the machine, using things he found <sup>3</sup> home, including an old video recorder. The machine would normally cost £3000, but Fred built his £450. It's like a DNA photocopier.

He collected DNA, <sup>5</sup> inside his brother's cheek. "The machine makes copies of this DNA so you can test how it reacts <sup>6</sup> different temperatures. Heating and cooling the sample allows you to separate the DNA, so I was able to see whether mine was different <sup>7</sup> his," said Fred.

He discovered that Gus has a particular gene that gives him red hair.

Fred has always been interested <sup>8</sup> science and his parents have always encouraged him. "They both took me <sup>9</sup> science museums when I was younger."

His passion for science will continue <sup>10</sup>
Oxford University, where he'll be studying Biochemistry <sup>11</sup> September. He said, "I'm not sure where I'll be <sup>12</sup> ten years, but I'd like to run my own technology business."

4 Read the information in the leaflet about becoming a vet. Then answer the questions.

So you want to be a vet?

You need to care about animals. You need to be strong and decisive. You need to be good at solving problems. It's also important to have good communication skills, so that you can talk to the animals' owners. And you need to be able to write good letters and emails.

It takes five years to study to be a vet. To study Veterinary Medicine at university, you will need qualifications in Biology, Chemistry and another subject, such as Maths.

It's a good idea to get work experience on farms, in veterinary clinics, at riding stables or in animal homes. This will show that you're really keen on becoming a vet and it will help you get a place on a university course.

Being a vet means working long hours, doing a lot of office work and being on call at night for emergencies. However, it's quite a well-paid job and you are helping to improve the health and happiness of animals.

Using compound adjectives

Compound adjectives are more common in writing than in conversation. You can use them as an economical and effective way of describing something. For example, look back at the compound adjectives you wrote in Exercise 1.

| _ | Make compound adjectives by taking one word from each column. #### 2 Write each question above the paragraph to which it refers.

Have I got the clothes I need for this expedition?

What can I borrow?

What's the weather going to be like?

How long am I going for?

What should my first-aid kit have in it?

Ask yourself these questions.

A two-day trip is very different from a three- or four-day expedition. Make sure you have what you need for the number of days. Think of food rations.

Check what's already in your wardrobe. Avoid items made of denim and cotton.

Ask around. See if anybody will lend you small items like a hat, a torch, a multi-tool or a space blanket.

Make sure you have plasters, bandages and antiseptic wipes.

You must have a waterproof jacket and preferably trousers too. Do you need suncream, a sun hat or sun glasses? Check the forecast. Remember that conditions can change very quickly.

The performance

1 Here is an example script for the play The Golden Touch. Complete it in your own words.

THE GOLDEN TOUCH Scene 1 The countryside near Midas's palace NARRATOR, TWO FARM WORKERS, SILENUS NARRATOR: there was a king called Midas. He ruled over the ancient kingdom of Phrygia. One day, two farm workers brought an old man to him. His name was Silenus. He had lost his way and was wandering in the countryside when they found him. Silenus is wandering round, looking lost. SILENUS: Where am I? I'm lost. Please help me! I'm an old man and I'm tired. I don't know where I am. Enter two farm workers. FARM WORKER 1: Look. There's an old man over there. He's lost. FARM WORKER 2: Let's go and talk to him. Perhaps we can help him. FARM WORKER 1: Are you lost? Can we help you? don't know where I am. FARM WORKER 2: What's your name? SILENUS: My name is Silenus. I'm from Lydia. FARM WORKER 1: Perhaps someone there can help you. Midas's palace MIDAS: Silenus, welcome! You must stay here at my palace and rest for a while before you return to Lydia. SILENUS: Thank you. You're very kind. I appreciate your generous hospitality. MIDAS: Not at all. But tell me, _

Scene 2 Lydia

NARRATOR, MIDAS, SILENUS AND DIONYSUS

NARRATOR: When Silenus was fit and strong again, Midas took him back to his home in Lydia, a neighbouring kingdom. There, Silenus was reunited with one of his young students, Dionysus.

MIDAS: Here we are.

SILENUS: Here he is.

Dionysus: Silenus, here you are at last. We were all very anxious about you. We wondered where you were.

SILENUS: I lost my way and I was wandering in Phrygia for several days until I was taken to King Midas's palace. He kindly invited me to stay and I enjoyed his generous hospitality until I was fit and strong again.

Dionysus: In return for your kindness, King Midas, choose a gift – anything you want.

MIDAS: Let me see. ____

Dionysus: Are you sure that is what you want? Think about it very carefully.

MIDAS: Yes, I'm sure.

Dionysus: Well, if that really is what you want ...

Scene 3 On the road between Lydia and Phrygia

NARRATOR, MIDAS

NARRATOR: Midas decided to test his new gift immediately.

MIDAS: I wonder if I really have the power to turn everything I touch to gold? Let's see what happens when I touch the branch of this tree.

It's a long story, Your Majesty.

| NARRATOR:                              | Midas couldn't believe his eyes.                               |

MIDAS: This has turned to gold too. SERVANT 1: Yes, Your Majesty. The servant brings some water and offers it to Midas. Midas takes the water MIDAS: I can't drink it. Even the water has turned to gold. Enter Aurelia. AURELIA: Father, what's wrong? Aurelia runs towards her father and puts her arms around him. She turns into a golden statue.

Scene 5 Midas's palace DIONYSUS, MIDAS, AURELIA (AS A STATUE) Midas, how are you? DIONYSUS: l made a terrible mistake. I shouldn't MIDAS: have asked for the golden touch. I wanted to be the richest man in the world but I'm now the poorest. I've lost what is most precious to me. DIONYSUS: Which would you rather have, a cup of cold water or the golden touch? MIDAS: A cup of water. DIONYSUS: Which would you rather have, a piece of bread or the golden touch? MIDAS: Do you want to have your daughter DIONYSUS: back, or do you want to have all the gold in the world? MIDAS: My daughter, my daughter, my beautiful child! Scene 6 Near the source of the River Pactolus NARRATOR, DIONYSUS, MIDAS NARRATOR: Dionysus felt sorry for Midas and he knew that the king had learned a useful lesson. Come, Midas. This is the River DIONYSUS: Pactolus. You must go to its source and put your hands in the water to wash away your crime. MIDAS: He goes to the river and puts his hands in the water. The river turns to gold. Enter Aurelia (as herself). MIDAS: Aurelia! AURELIA: Father! MIDAS: Come with me. All the gold in the world isn't as precious as you are to me. We'll live a simple, happy life in the country.

And they lived happily ever after!

THE END

the golden touch!

Relative clauses

A clause is a part of a sentence.

The Amazon River Basin, which lies just below the equator, covers about 40% of South America.

This is a relative clause. We call it a non-defining relative clause because it gives extra information. The information is not essential, but it's interesting.

People managed to escape the massive wave which/that was caused by an earthquake.

This is also a relative clause. We call it a defining relative clause because it defines exactly what we're talking about. It is essential to the meaning. In this case, we're talking about the particular wave that was caused by an earthquake.

Relative pronouns: who, which, that

|                               | Use who for people. The word who replaces he, she or they.                                    | Use which or that for things. The word which or that replaces it or they.             |
|-------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|                               | who                                                                                                         | which/that                                                                            |
| Non-defining relative clauses | Francisco de Orellana, who came from Extremadura in Spain, led an expedition down the Amazon River in 1542. | The Amazon River, which starts in Peru, flows through six countries in South America. |
| Defining relative clauses     | I met the girl who rang the emergency bell.                                                                 | It was her quick thinking which saved people's lives.                                 |

Leaving out relative pronouns

When a relative pronoun (which, that, who) is the object of the verb which follows, we can put it in or leave it out. However, we can't leave out a relative pronoun when it is the subject of the verb which follows.

The report that I read said no one had died.

The report I read said no one had died.

the object of the verb read

The report that said no one had died was wrong.

the subject of the verb said

Past simple

Use the past simple for something that happened at a particular time in the past and is completed. We often use the past simple with time expressions such as yesterday, last weekend, on Monday, two years ago. A lot of past simple verbs are irregular. On page 113, there is a list of irregular past tenses.

Present perfect

Use the present perfect for something that started in the past that has a present result:

I've bought you a present.

• something that started in the past and continues up to now:

I've been at this school for two years.

• recent events or actions:

I've finished my homework.

We often use the present perfect with expressions such as ever, never, already and yet.

Past continuous

Use the past continuous for something that was happening around a particular time in the past:

What were you doing at this time yesterday?

Use the past continuous with the past simple to talk about something that was happening when something else happened:

I was walking down the street when I saw my English teacher.

Compare these two sentences:

- 1 I was having dinner when the storm started.
- 2 I had dinner when the storm started.

In sentence 1 you had already started eating your dinner and then the storm started.

In sentence 2 you started to eat your dinner at the same time as (or soon after) the storm started.

Past simple passive

Use the past simple passive when you don't know who did the action, or when it's not important to know who did it:

The flight was cancelled because of poor weather conditions.

Past perfect simple

Use the past perfect simple for something that happened before another event in the past:

We had already set out for the airport when the storm started.

Abstract nouns

An abstract noun is a noun which refers to a quality, an idea or a feeling.

"Friendship ... is not something you learn in school. But if you haven't learned the meaning of friendship, you really haven't learned anything."

Muhammed Ali, boxer

| quality       | idea      | feeling        |
|---------------|-----------|----------------|
| determination | beauty    | happiness      |
| kindness      | education | disappointment |
| strength      | freedom   | fear           |

We usually use abstract nouns without the or alan. However, when you make an abstract noun specific rather than general, you use the or alan:

You need determination to be successful.

She's only 12 years old, but she has the determination of someone twice her age.

Present perfect continuous

Use the present perfect continuous to talk about actions continuing up to now, especially with for and since to say how long they have lasted.

We've been living here for three years.

You can also use the present perfect continuous for continuous actions in the past that have a present result:

I've been playing the flute since I was eight.

Your hair's wet. Have you been swimming?

You aren't hungry because you've been eating sweets all day.

Position of adverbs

Adverbs of frequency

always, often, usually/normally, sometimes, never

Adverbs of certainty

certainly, definitely, probably

Other useful adverbs

already, also, only, just, still, even

These adverbs go before main verbs:

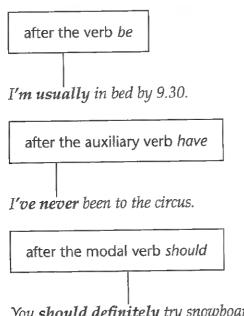

I usually read for a while before I go to sleep.

I definitely want to study music at college.

I only took up the piano last year.

However, the adverbs go after the verb be and auxiliary verbs and modals, e.g. have, will, can, must, should, etc.

You should definitely try snowboarding. You'd really enjoy it.

Phrasal verbs: word order

You can say:

Switch the TV off.

OR

Switch off the TV.

Turn the volume down.

OR

Turn down the volume.

But if the object is a pronoun (for example, it rather than the TV), you must separate the two parts of the verb:

NOT

Switch off it.

Switch it off.

Turn it down.

NOT

Turn down it.

Comparative adjectives with much, etc.

These are some rules for making comparative adjectives:

• for most one-syllable adjectives ending in -e, add -r close > closer

• for other one-syllable adjectives, add -er

long > longer

ullet for two-syllable adjectives ending in -y, change the y to i and add -er

easy > easier

• for other two-syllable adjectives, use more in front of the adjective

useful > more useful

• for longer adjectives, use more in front of the adjective convenient > more convenient

When an adjective ends in a single vowel and a single consonant, and the final syllable is stressed, double the consonant before adding -er big > bigger

To make comparisons between things that are equal, use as ... as:

Your garden's as big as a football pitch!

To make negative comparisons use less ... than or not as ... as:

The blender is less expensive than the food processor.

The blender isn't as expensive as the food processor.

To make comparisons stronger, use:

much

You're much neater than I am. You're much more helpful at home than I am. (OR ... than me)

far ... than

The kitchen is far bigger than the dining room.

a lot less ... than

The new dishwasher's a lot less noisy than the old one.

nowhere near as ... as

My room's nowhere near as colourful as yours.

just as ... as

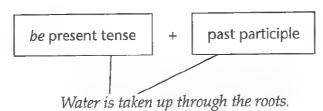

My room's just as messy as your room.

Grammar: Unit 8

The present passive

In scientific and technical writing, the passive is often used.

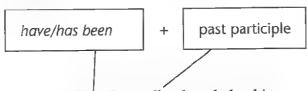

We use the passive because we want to focus on the action, not the person or thing that does the action.

|                     |                                | questions           | short answers               |
|---------------------|--------------------------------|---------------------|-----------------------------|
| Oxygen is released. | Carbon dioxide isn't released. | Is oxygen released? | Yes, it is. / No, it isn't. |

For a list of irregular past participles, see page 113.

The present perfect passive

Richard has been offered a scholarship.

We also use the passive when we don't know who does the action, or when it isn't important to know.

|                                          |                                | questions                       | short answers                          |
|------------------------------------------|--------------------------------|---------------------------------|----------------------------------------|
| The lion lights have been used in Kenya. | The lions haven't been killed. | Have the lion lights been used? | Yes, they have. /No, they haven't. |

If we want to say who does the action, we can use by:

Richard has been offered a scholarship by the headteacher at one of Kenya's top schools.

Questions beginning with prepositions

Prepositions are words like to, at, from, by, on, about. In conversation, prepositions usually come at the end of a question: Which cinema did you go to? Where did you get your shoes from? What were you talking about?

In formal language and in sentences which are complex, it is sometimes clearer to put the preposition at the beginning of the question: On which building is there a roof designed to look like the sails on a ship?

Past continuous

Use the past continuous to say that something was happening around a particular time in the past.

Past continuous active

We were driving across the bridge when a rainbow appeared.

|                     |                  | resulting.          | iproducin.           | Snort answers                      |
|---------------------|------------------|---------------------|----------------------|------------------------------------|
| Past continuous   V | We were driving. | We weren't walking. | Were youdriving? | Yes, we were. /No, we weren't. |

Past continuous passive

We use the passive when we don't know who does the action, or when it isn't important to know.

The bridge was being built when we went to France.

|                         | DOSITIVE                                           | negative                                         | questions                   | short answers                    |
|-------------------------|----------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|----------------------------------|
| Past continuous passive | The bridge was being built when we went to France. | It wasn't being used because it wasn't finished. | Was the bridge being built? | Yes, it was, /No, it wasn't. |

For a list of irregular past participles, see page 113.

Adjectives followed by prepositions

Adjectives sometimes have prepositions after them. It's helpful to learn them as whole phrases. I'm afraid of spiders.

They were angry about the referee's decision.

Don't be angry with me. I was doing my best.

Don't get anxious about the exam. You'll be fine.

I'm bad at tennis. I haven't got good hand—eye co-ordination.

A Canadian accent is different from an American accent.

I'm a bit disappointed with my exam results. I should have done better.

We're very excited about the trip to Paris.

Are you frightened of spiders?

She's very good at Maths.

I'm interested in archaeology.

Thank you. That's very kind of you.

Your uncle and aunt were very kind to me when I stayed with them.

I'm pleased about the new timetable. It means we don't have to get to school so early.

I'm pleased with my new phone. It's better than my old one.

We were surprised at/by how expensive everything was in London.

This cheese is very typical of the region.

What's wrong with you today? You're a bit quiet.

Prepositions followed by nouns

Nouns sometimes have prepositions before them. It's helpful to learn them as whole phrases. Notice that some nouns need the.

at (the age of) 15

at school/university/college

at home

at night/midnight

at the cinema/the theatre

at the weekend

by car/bus/bike, etc.

by Shakespeare/Tolstoy

in the morning/the afternoon/the evening in pen/pencil

in the news

in time (We arrived in time to catch the train)

on time (The train arrived on time)

on the radio

on TV

Verbs followed by verb + -ing

(don't) mind

finish

admit

give up

avoid imagine

can't help involve can't stand

keep (on) consider miss delay

practise

deny

risk

enjoy

spend time

fancy suggest feel like

I enjoy going to the cinema.

Do you fancy going to the cinema tonight?

Prepositions followed by verb + -ing

Use the -ing form after all prepositions.

You're very good at making things.

Thank you for helping me.

I'm keen on riding.

Do you feel like playing tennis?

will future

Use will for giving information about the future and for predicting what we think or guess will happen.

| positive      | I'm looking forward to the trip. It'll be really interesting. |
|---------------|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| negative      | You won't be bored.                                           |
| questions     | Will it be hot and sunny?                                     |
| short answers | Yes, it will. / No, it won't.                                 |

Future continuous

Use the future continuous for saying that something will be in progress at a time in the future:

| positive      | By the time I'm 30, I'll be working as an engineer. |
|---------------|-----------------------------------------------------|
| negative      | I won't be studying for exams.                      |
| questions     | Will you be living in this country?                 |
| short answers | Yes, I will. / No, I won't.                         |

Reflexive pronouns

| (a) My Color | reflexive pronoun        |
|--------------|--------------------------|
| I            | myself                   |
| you          | yourself                 |
| he/she/it    | himself, herself, itself |
| we           | ourselves                |
| you          | yourselves               |
| they         | themselves               |

Use reflexive pronouns with verbs when the object is the same person (or thing) as the subject:

I fell over, but I didn't hurt myself.

Parrots like looking at themselves in the mirror.

Do not use reflexive pronouns with these verbs:

get up, wash, feel, relax, hurry

Notice the difference between:

They looked at themselves. (They looked at their own reflection in a mirror.)

AND

They looked at each other. (Each person looked at the other person.)

Notice also:

They have known each other for a long time.

NOI

They have known themselves for a long time.

You can use reflexive pronouns to emphasise the subject or object:

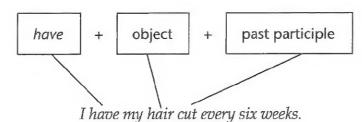

I made this cake myself.

Did you paint your room yourself?

to have something done

If you have something done, someone does it for you. You don't do it yourself.

You can also use get something done. It means the same as have something done.

I get my hair cut every six weeks.

Past perfect in reported speech

When we tell people what someone said, we usually change the tense because what they said was in the past. If someone uses the present perfect in direct speech, we change it to the past perfect in reported speech.

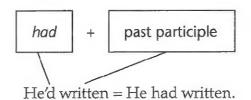

"I've just read a book about Arctic explorers."→ He said he'd just read a book about Arctic explorers.

"I haven't read a book about explorers before." → He said he hadn't read a book about explorers before.

If someone uses the past simple in direct speech, we also change it to the past perfect in reported speech.

"I wrote a book review for the school magazine." → He said he'd written a book review for the school magazine.

"I didn't write a short story."→ He said he hadn't written a short story.

He hadn't written = He had not written.

despite, in spite of

Despite and in spite of introduce contrasting ideas. Notice that you can put them at the beginning or in the middle of a sentence.

Despite / In spite of their problems, they have continued to have a positive attitude.

They have continued to have a positive attitude despite / in spite of their problems.

You can use despite / in spite of followed by an -ing form.

Despite / In spite of having very little food and water, they are managing to survive.

Modals

must and have to

Must and have to are similar in meaning.

Use must to express personal feelings:

I really loved that book. I must read it again. (I feel I really want to read the book again.)

Use have to to express obligations:

I have to read this book by Friday. (The teacher has told us to read this book by Friday.)

Use must or have to to talk about rules:

You must be at school by 8.30.

You have to be at school by 8.30.

Use must to talk about the present or the future, but not the past. If you want to talk about the past, use had to:

I had to finish the book. It was so exciting that I couldn't put it down.

mustn't and don't have to Use mustn't to say what is not allowed: You mustn't talk when the teacher's talking.

Use don't have to to say that something isn't necessary:

You don't have to be good at sport to enjoy it.

must and should

Use must to say that it is necessary to do something:

You must do your homework before you watch TV.

must has a stronger meaning than should:

You should do your homework before you watch TV. (It's a good idea to ...)

Comparative adverbs

To make comparative adverbs, use more + adverb (than).

The rescue operation was reported more widely than previous mining rescue attempts.

To make comparisons stronger, use much:

It was reported much more widely than previous rescue attempts.

The following comparatives are irregular:

| adverb | comparative |
|--------|-------------|
| well   | better      |
| badly  | worse       |
| far    | further     |
| much   | more        |

Some comparatives of adverbs end in -er:

| adverb | comparative |
|--------|-------------|
| fast   | faster      |
| long   | longer      |
| high   | higher      |

Remember to use the base form of the adverb with (not) as ... as:

I don't run as fast as you. NOT I don't run as faster as you.

Grammar: Unit 17

Indirect and embedded questions

To ask for information and to make questions more polite, start with 'Do you know ...?' or 'Could you tell me ...?'

Remember to change the word order.

Where is the station?

Could you tell me where the station is?

Remember, too, that you don't use the auxiliaries do, does or did; and you must make the verb agree with the subject.

What time does the bus leave?

Do you know what time the bus leaves?

NOT

Do you know what time does the bus leave?

With Yes/No questions, use if or whether.

Is there a swimming pool at the hotel?

I wonder if/whether there's a swimming pool at the hotel.

Reported speech: summary

When we tell people what someone said, we usually change the tense of the verb because what they said was in the past.
